Subscriptions will be marked as unpaid after the payment and it's retry attempts failed for 7 days in a row. Customers will be notified via their provided E-Mail address, if payments fail, so they can intervene accordingly by either cancelling their subscription or providing a new payment method. The prices will be charged for the time your subscription was active but not paid, usually 7 days. (Example: 3 licenses, 500 API uses and 5 users = 3€ + 25€ + 25€ = 53€ → 7 days unpaid $53/30 \cdot 7 = 12,37€$ + 3€ accounting fee → always rounded for your favour = 15€ base fee). Following this calculation a certain discount will be calculated according to the following system.

Amount	% Calculated
First 500€	100%
Next 1.000€	75%
Next 1.000€	50%
Next 5.000€	25%
Rest	15%

Assuming a – very likely exaggerated – base fee of 10.000€, the following calculation will result in the total fee to be paid in case of a failed payment for 7 days:

$$500*100\% + 1000*75\% + 1000*50\% + 5000*25\% + 2500*15\% = \mathbf{3.375\text{€ excl. Tax}}$$

In most cases, additional charging in case of an unpaid subscription for 7 days will stay within the first 500€ range. Price reductions are being done in favour of the customer as we are still interested in working with you. This charge isn't a penalty fee but moreover a charge for the 7 days you were able to use our services which weren't paid, which is why we unfortunately can not waive this fee under no given circumstances.

Paying this additional fee is mandatory as accepted by the customer in our terms of service. This fee does not replace the outstanding payment for your subscription and will thus not reactivate it. Failure to pay the fee will result in a first and second warning (each costing additional 4€) and finally in a debt collection agency collecting the fee for us, which will cause even higher charges for the customer unfortunately). In such cases the customer itself will be prohibited from further subscribing to our services, until outstanding fees are either paid or finally marked as irrecoverable. The customer will remain in this state even after this marking – if applicable.
